

John A. Carey
Inspector General
Palm Beach County

John Carey became the Inspector General of Palm Beach County on June 23, 2014. His office provides independent oversight to 42 separate government entities to include the County, 39 municipalities, and two Special Districts.

John has accumulated more than 45 years of government service, from the local to the federal level. For the past 21 years, he served in the inspector general field. Before coming to Palm Beach County, John was the Inspector General for the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA). Prior to joining DIA, he helped establish the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI) serving as its first Deputy IG. Before joining the ODNI he was the Deputy IG of the U.S. Marine Corps. John is a retired Marine Corps colonel with occupational specialties in infantry, intelligence, and military police.

Currently, John is on the Executive Board of the Association of Inspectors General (AIG). He volunteered to lead the development and establishment of the AIG's Certified Inspector General Inspector/Evaluator course. Additionally, John is the Chair of the AIG Professional Certification Board and Course Manager for the Certified Inspector General course. He is a Certified Inspector General and Certified Inspector General Auditor.

He holds a Bachelors of Arts degree (cum laude) from the Grace College, a Masters of Strategic Studies from the U.S. Army War College, and a Masters of Arts in Christian Studies from Palm Beach Atlantic University. He also attended the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy, the Federal Executive Institute, and the Kellogg School of Management.
